

Vitamin k antagonists (VKAs) interact with certain drugs, increasing either risk of bleeding or risk of blood clots (due to effect on potency)